A LITTLE HOULIGAN HISTORY

The original Bros. Houligan was located at 15th & Atlanta in Tulsa, OK. Everything started on November 13th, 1987, which coincidentally was a Friday, when the 15th street location was opened by 2 of the 3 McMurchy brothers. Eventually all 3 brother Pat, Mike & Tim, worked at the restaurant. When they were young their mother Mille, would have told you that the boys were little Houligan's. So, the new restaurant was aptly named The Bros. Houligan.

In truth the 15th Street location started as more of a bar than a restaurant. With pool tables, pinball machines and a juke box adorning the scenery, and in those days the neighborhood matched this rougher aesthetic. However, as fate would have it the brothers had worked as chefs at many higher end restaurants and most recently at the legendary Tulsa fine dining restaurant The Louisiane. They decided to take their culinary knowhow and apply it in the small kitchen area of their newly founded bar. In short order the excellent food mixed with the casual atmosphere meant that the pool tables and pinball machines were gone, making way for a real dining room area.

By the early 2000's the Bros. Houligan's reputation for great food and an easy-going style had created lines out the door and it was time for a second location. A remodeled convenience store at 61st & Mingo served as that second location for many years. That is until an opportunity to move to a new spot with great potential led to what was referred to as "South" being relocated at 48th & Yale where it still is today.

The second location dwarfed the original in both kitchen and dining room size. This led to having a larger menu and the capacity to serve more customers. However, this larger menu was hard to execute in the humble bar kitchen at the 15th Street location. So, in response Houligan's Corner was born. The idea was to let the original location get back to its roots and somewhat separate it from its larger sibling. Which it did but Cherry Street had evolved over the 30 plus years and the once humble spot that was affordable for the brothers at the start was now valuable Cherry Street real estate. An offer was made that simply couldn't be refused and with a heavy heart the 15th Street location was closed and the building sold.

Now today Houligan's Corner is reborn in Broken Arrow. With the same great food and philosophy that made the original 15th Street store so special to so many people. Houligan's Corner is not imitation, it's the original, even the sign outside is the same as that which adorned 15th Street and many of the people that helped make it so special for decades are still involved. So, sit back, relax and enjoy all your Houligan's favorites at our newest home.
